

Industry brief. Summarising the study of the previous authors. Across the twelve evaluated workloads, the process-in-memory configuration reduced measured off-chip data movement by 41 percent relative to the baseline. This brief adds no new measurements and reuses the original dataset.